PROGRAMME • SPOUSES' PROGRAMME

EDA Autumn Conference 2010 and Demolition Fair DEMCON, 8th – 10th September, Infra City Hotel, Upplands Väsby, Stockholm, Sweden

- 13.30 "Dismantling project in the middle of two explosion-risk areas and close to a shock-sensitive turbine in petrochemical industry", by Mr Marcel Schröder, EDA IC member Richard Liesegang, Germany
- 13.50 Q & A
- 14.00 Panel debate about the future of demolition in Europe moderated by journalist Ms Laura Donadoni, Italy
- In the light of the economic crisis, is it better to have a vertical, super-specialised business model or a broad business model with skills in a number of sectors?
 - If the business model is to be broadened, then the environmental sector is probably the main one which will have to be developed. Should the business expand with internal divisions specialising in asbestos, reclaim and waste management, or would it be better to assign these tasks to external subcontractors specialising in the individual sectors?
 - Other than reclamations which have to be carried out, what steps can a demolition company take to be more eco-sustainable? (e.g. using electric excavators)
 - Finally, there are environmental certifications such as ISO and EMAS. In your opinion, do these bring real advantages from an environmental point of view?
- 14.45 Closure by EDA President Mr Giuseppe Panseri and the end of the Conference
- 15.30 Three different options
